

Nicole gave her friend a gift.
Was Nicole nice? Was Nicole mean?

James hit his friend.
Was James nice? Was James mean?

Kyle broke his mom's vase, and he told his mom the truth that he broke it. Was Kyle telling the truth?

Pam ate five cookies, but Pam told her mom a lie that she didn't eat any cookie. Was Pam telling the truth?

Look, this is Stanley!
One day, Stanley saw a paper.

Stanley said, "I'm going to look at the back of this paper!"

Stanley flipped the drawing over and looked at the drawing,
and he did not like the drawing at all —
he thought the drawing was ugly!

So did Stanley like the drawing or did he not like the drawing?

Stanley's friend Heather also wanted to look at the drawing.
Heather asked Stanley, "Stanley, how did you like the drawing?"
Stanley told Heather, "Heather, the drawing was pretty."

So what did Stanley tell Heather again?

Let's think about the story again.
Stanley thought the drawing was ugly.
And Stanley told Heather that the drawing was pretty.

Was Stanley telling the truth?
Was Stanley mean? Was Stanley nice?

Look, this is Richard!
One day, Richard saw a paper.

Richard said, "I'm going to look at the back of this paper!"

Richard flipped the drawing over and looked at the drawing,
and he did not like the drawing at all —
he thought the drawing was ugly!

So did Richard like the drawing or did he not like the drawing?

Richard's friend Heather also wanted to look at the drawing.
Heather asked Richard, "Richard, how did you like the drawing?"
Richard told Heather, "Heather, the drawing was ugly."

So what did Richard tell Heather again?

Let's think about the story again.
Richard thought the drawing was ugly.
And Richard told Heather that the drawing was ugly.

Was Richard telling the truth?
Was Richard mean? Was Richard nice?

Remember Stanley and Richard from our story?
Look, here they are.

Stanley thought the drawing was ugly.
And Stanley told Heather that the drawing was pretty.
Richard thought the drawing was ugly.
And Richard told Heather that the drawing was ugly.

If Heather makes a drawing, who will Heather ask about her drawing, Stanley or Richard? Why?

If you make a drawing, who do you want to ask about your drawing, Stanley or Richard? Why?

Who do you want to play with more, Stanley or Richard? Why?

That's the end of the story about Heather, Stanley and Richard!
That was fun!

Now are you ready to listen to my next story?

Look, this is Sally!
One day, Sally saw a free cookie.

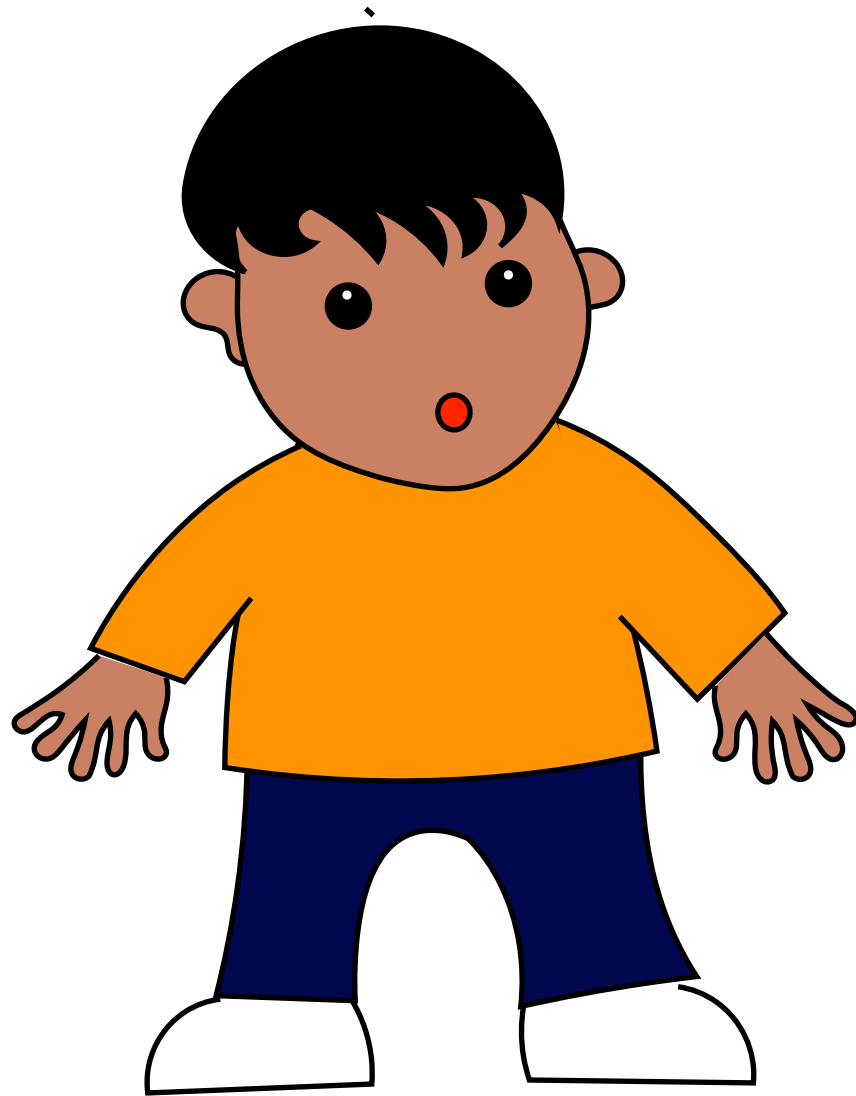

Sally said, "It's a free cookie, I'll try it!"

Sally tasted the cookie,
and she did not like the cookie at all —
she thought the cookie tasted yucky!

So did Sally like the cookie or did she not like the cookie?

Sally's friend Edward also wanted to taste the cookie.
Edward asked Sally, "Sally, how did you like the cookie?"
Sally told Edward, "Edward, the cookie was yucky."

So what did Sally tell Edward again?

Let's think about the story again.
Sally thought the cookie was yucky.
And Sally told Edward that the cookie was yucky.

Was Sally telling the truth?
Was Sally mean? Was Sally nice?

Look, this is Mary!
One day, Mary saw a free cookie.

Mary said, "It's a free cookie, I'll try it!"

Mary tasted the cookie,
and she did not like the cookie at all —
she thought the cookie tasted yucky!

So did Mary like the cookie or did she not like the cookie?

Mary's friend Edward also wanted to taste the cookie.
Edward asked Mary, "Mary, how did you like the cookie?"
Mary told Edward, "Edward, the cookie was tasty."

So what did Mary tell Edward again?

Let's think about the story again.
Mary thought the cookie was yucky.
And Mary told Edward that the cookie was tasty.

Was Mary telling the truth?
Was Mary mean? Was Mary nice?

Remember Sally and Mary from our story?
Look, here they are.

Remember, Sally thought the cookie was yucky.
told Edward that the cookie was yucky.
Mary thought the cookie was yucky.
told Edward that the cookie was tasty.

If Edward bakes a cookie, who will Edward ask about his cookie, Sally or Mary? Why?
If you bake a cookie, who do you want to ask about your cookie, Sally or Mary? Why?
Who do you want to play with more, Sally or Mary? Why?

That's the end of the story about Edward, Sally and Mary!
That was fun!
